When meeting-bells began to toll,
And pious folk began to pass,
She defly tied her bounst on,
The little, sober meeting-lass,
All in her neat, white-curtained room, b
her tiny looking-glass.

So square she tied the satin strings,
And set the bown beneath her chin;—
Then smiled to see how sweet she looked;
Then thought her vanity a sin,
And she must put such thoughts away befor
the sermon should begin.

But, sitting 'neath the preached word,
Demurely, in her father's pew,
She thought about her bonnet still—
Yes, all the parson's sermon through,—
About its pretty bows and buds, which better than the text she knew.

Yet sitting there with peaceful face, The reflex of her simple soul, She looked to be a very saint,— And may be was one, on the whole— Only that her pretty bonnet kept away the

The him for ornamental pressing is not used in a clay state, but as a liquid, slip-like, thick cream. This is poured into the orifice of the smalld left for the purpose, and then allowed to stand for a short time; when sufficient slip has adhered to the mould, the remainder the standard of the standard to the mould, the remainder the standard to the stan shrinkage, or contraction to which we have allusted is one of the most important changes as well as one of the greatest difficulties encountered in the art of pottery. The change will be more or less, according to the materials used and the process employed in making. The contractions are sufficiently well known to the modeler, and he makes allow ance in the model accordingly, the design being fashioned so much larger than is actually required; the shrinkage from the original model to the finished object being sometimes equal to $5 per cent. equal to 25 per cent.

The manufactured objects being now ready the biscuit oven, where may be seen some hundreds of seggars of all shapes and sizes. These seggars, which are made of fire clay and are very strong, are the cases in which the ware is to be burned. Common brown wares, when the fire is comparatively easy, may be burned without any protection, as the fire or the smoke cannot injure them; but for percelain or white earthenware these Watches, Jewelry Silverware The seggars are made of various shapes to suit the different wares. The seggars when full are piled one over the other most carefully in the oven, so as to allow the pressure to be equalized as much hen the oven is heated to a white heat (calulated as equal to about 25,000 degree Fah.) the least irregularity of bearing might bly affect the firing of the whole oven, causing he same in all ages, viz., that of a cone or a arge beehive. A china oven is generally about fourteen feet in diameter inside. It is built of firebricks, and is incased several times round with bands of iron to prevent too great expansion from the heat inside. There are generally eight fireplaces around the are generally eight fireplaces around the oven in different directions. A china oven takes about forty hours to fire; it is then left too cool for about forty-eight hours. In order to test the burning, the fireman draws small test cups through holes in different parts of the oven made for the purpose. These tests show, both by contraction and the arrives decrease of translucency, the parts of the oven made for the purpose. These tests show, both by contraction and the various degrees of translucency, the progress of the fire.

The porcelain having been burnt is now in the state called biscuit; it is translucent and perfectly vitreous. Having had the fint rubbed off the surface and been carefully examined, it is sent to the dipping room. The dipping room is supplied with large tubs of various glazes, suitable to the different kinds of ware. The glaze is really a kind of glass, which is chemically prepared of borax, lead, fint, etc., that when burned will adhere to the porcelain, and will not craze or crackle on the surface. This glaze is ground very fine theing on the mill for about ten days) until it assumes the consistency of cream.

From the dipping-room the ware is brought into the drying stove, where the glaze is dried on the ware. It is then taken by women into the trimming-room, where any superfluous glaze is taken off, and defective places are made good. From this room it is taken to the glost-oven placing-house. The glost-oven is of the same construction as the biscuit. It takes sixteen hours to fire, and the tests are made in the same manner as in the biscuit oven. The average heat is equal to about 11,000 degrees Fahrenheit. In about thirty-six hours the oven will be sufficiently cool for the ware to be removed. It is then sent into the white warehouse, where it is sorted and given out to the painters and gilders, to be decorated according to the orders on the books.

Visitors generally look forward with pleasure to the mysteries of the decorating department. It is interesting to watch the painters, some on landscapes, others on birds, or flowers, or butterflies. All are interested in their work, which to the uninitiated may appear at first sight to be very unpromising, the colors being dull, and the drawing unfinished. After the first "wash in" has been burned, and the painter has worked upon it for the second fire, the forms and finish, both in style and color, begin to appear. The colors used are all made from metallic oxides; thus copper gives green and black; cobalt, blue; gold, purple, iron, red; etc.

From Professor Snow.

LAWRENCE, August 10, 1883.

It gives me pleasure to certify to the great benefits received by my son and daughter, aged respectively twelve and ten years, by the use of Prof. H. Samuels' glasses. Both of them had suffered from defective sight, so that they had been compelled to abandon school for more than a year. Other eminent authorities had prescribed for them without succes, but Prof. Samuels' spectacles gave them immediate and permanent relief. My son is now able to do entirely without glasses, his eyes having been restored to their natural condition by the timely and skillful application of srifficial aid.

Professor Samuels offers to those that are suffering from weakness and defective sight his improved crystal-glass spectacles, superior to any other in use. They are constructed in accordance with the philosophy of nature, adapted to the organs of sight and perfectly natural to the oye. The advantages of these spectles are—

First—That they can be worn with perfect case for any length of time at one sitting, giving astonishing clearness of vision by candle or other artificial light, and comfort to the spectacle wearer hitherto unknown.

Prof. Samuele:

DRAR SIR—I cheerfully add my name to the many who have testified to the worth of your glasses. The pair I obtained from you give me great Satisfaction.
